COUNTING NOSES

WHILE, TO THE BEST of my recollection, I have never failed to stand up and be counted whenever the necessity has arisen, I was among those missing when Canada took its census last month. But here let me interject that we duly informed the census-takers prior to our departure for Britain, in the interests of numerical accuracy and in order that Canada's too few millions should not be depleted even by two such unimportant persons as ourselves.

This seems to have been census year in general, for the United Kingdom was in the throes of it when we arrived there.

And we found some of the repercussions amusing, as various rugged individualists recorded their objections to standing up to be counted along with all the other noses.

RUGGED INDIVIDUALIST

IT WAS ONLY to be expected that the president and founder of The Society of Individualists—Sir Ernest Benn, the 75-year-old publisher—should be among those irked at being enumerated among the masses.

When summoned for falling to give the necessary informa tion, it was stated in court that Sir Ernest had written across the census form: "In view of the critical state of the national economy I must refuse to take any part in this unnecessary waste of manpower, money, paper, and print."

CANADIAN OBJECTS

EVIDENTLY THE AGED individualist couldn't carry his convictions to the extent that he hoped. For not only was he fined £5 plus two guineas costs for the offense—which seems to me an awful waste of money—but the legal processes. Involved must also have involved quite a lot of manpower, money, paper and print, if I know anything of such processes. But then, he may have thought his own outlay was justified, that being the way of protesting individualists the world over.

But it was to a Canadian—of British birth—that fell the doubtful honor of being the defendant in the first case in England and Wales arising out of the census. Late in May, K. W. Halliday of Lancing, Sussex, was haled before the Shoreham magistrate for refusing to co-operate with the census-taker. SAID "GET OUT!"

ACCORDING TO THE press report, the Canadian, who occupied a flat with his mother, refused to put anything on the form except his name and initials, and that of his mother. When asked for further particulars he told the enumerator: "Get out! That is all you are going to get, you can fine me if you like."

I don't suppose it was a question of what the unfortunate enumerator liked, but the law of the land pursued its normal course. And in due course Mr. Halliday was also summoned—and fined £5 plus one guinea costs. Evidently it was not as expensive for him to break the law as it was for the president of The Society of Individualists.

SINISTER OR ERRONEOUS?

BUT WHAT AMUSED ME was the Canadian's letter to the magistrate—for he did not appear in person. It read:

"There can be only three motives for requiring details of my life in another country, sinister, error or curiosity. You may consider how deplorable it is for me, a Canadian citizen of British birth, to be coerced into a position of widening the breach between North America and Great

And he added that he had no alternative but "to accept a situation which requires my departure. This will take place on June 23.

WIDENING THE BREACH?

SO I ASSUME that this conscientious-objector-to-censuses is now back in Canada. And I am hoping, for Canada's sake, that he timed his arrival too late for the counting of noses in this country. It is bad enough to have an English enumerator responsible for such a serious widening of the breach between North America-not just Canada, you note-and Great Britain, odness knows. So I hesitate to think of the incalculable harm that might be caused not only to this Dominion's internal relations but to her international ties as well were he to be approached by a Canadian enumerator in his present state

Vet while I laugh at the Benns and Hallidays. I have a sneaking admiration for them, too. In a world which is being more and more reduced to mass control by bureaucracy and "ideocracy," it is refreshing to find such rugged resistance to regimentation

Calgary Firm Wins Battle Against Tax

LONDON (CP) — A Calgary construction company today won its legal fight against a tax imposed in 1947.

The judicial committee of the Privy Council allowed with costs an appeal by Bennett and White (Calgary) Ltd., against judgment by the Supreme Court of Canada involving an assessment on prop erty.

The case originated in July, 1946, when the Canadian govern-ment entered into a contract with the company for construction of two tunnels in connection with the St. Mary dam project in western Canada

Subsequently, the respondents municipal districts of Sugar City No. 5, assessed the company's plant, equipment and personal property at the St. Mary River dam at $183,147, an assessment reduced to $124,450, or which $3,915 tax was demanded.

The company contended it had been wrongfully assessed since the property at all relevant times was the property of the crown. Litigation started in Alberta and progressed by stages to the Su-preme Court of Canada, which dismissed the company's action.

"For years farmers have talked about what they could do if they only had rain during the growing season like they had in the winter," English explained. "Well,

"That's not so much when you consider that it takes 27,000 gallons to put one inch of water on an acre," he pointed out.

Victoria's Opportunity

THROUGH THE GENEROSITY OF the Spencer family, Greater Victoria now stands in a position to overcome one of its most serious cultural defici encies. The Spencer Foundation offer of the old family home on Moss Street to the city for an art gallery is one which the authorities should not hesitate to

For many years Victoria has been acutely conscious of the invidious position it occupies through lack of adequate facilities to carry on the work of an arts centre. It has been virtually alone in this respect among communities of comparable size and importance throughout Cahada. The situation is the more regrettable in view of the high assessment of cultural appreciation here—an appreciation indicated by the support accorded the Arts Centre in its present inadequate quarters by 500 members.

Presumably the acceptance of the gift would entail some expense to the city. It would be required to maintain the grounds and would forego collection of taxes on the estate. That, surely, is a low price to pay for the acquisition of such a valuable property. Furthermore, such costs would be negligible in comparison with the educational and cultural value of the establishment.

There should be no delay on Victorie's

There should be no delay on Victoria's part in taking advantage of the oppor-tunity which has been provided. Moreover, since the Art Centre would be of high community value, adjacent munici-palities may very properly manifest their interest in the project through offers to

Bread And Folly

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANada are rightly concerned with business monopolies and combines which raise prices unjustly. But, as a recent case in Winnipeg has shown, two can play at this game, against the public

When certain Winnipeg stores decided to sell bread at 2 loaves for 23 cents, as compared with a price of 25 cents fixed by most other stores, the Canadian Bakery Workers' union at-tempted to enforce the higher price. It refused to deliver bread to any store which sold bread for less. The stores which sold bread for less. The stores which were trying to break the fixed price and thus assist the consumer were otted by the union.

Here, surely, was an extraordinary case of folly in the thinking of the bak-ery workers' union. If anyone in Can-ada should be opposed to high prices it is the member of the labor union the working man and his family. Yet here was a union boycotting stores which tried to hold prices down. The merchant mum margin of profit, who refused to go along with a general price increase

The bakery workers in fact were cooperating with certain employers to raise the cost of living. And we may be sure that, at the same time, this union like every other in the country, was properly denouncing the general price level.

The Winnipeg union has had second and wiser thoughts. It has agreed to deliver bread to merchants who sell it below the general price, so long as the wages of its members are not affected thereby. But it would be useful if this union and others thought still farther into this subject and realized that competition is the surest way of establishing just prices. Whenever employers or unions suppress competition they are suppressing the natural level of prices, they are keeping prices higher than they

A union which demands higher wages may or may not raise retail prices, de-pending upon the profit margin of the employer and the efficiency of his business. It is a very different thing when a union combines with an employer and attempts to fix a retail price the public—including all union members—must pay. such means organized labor would cut its own throat. Most unions fortunately are too wise to embark on any such folly. The Winnipeg incident, however, is a lesson worth observing.

He Might Be Useful

THE QUESTION OF ESTABLISHING American air bases in Spain is rais American air bases in Spain is rais-ing considerable opposition in Britain and France. The undemocratic nature of Generalissimo Franco's regime has long kept him out of the inner circle of non-Communist countries. Spain has not been admitted to the United Nations, to the North Atlantic Pact, to 'Europe's Western Union, nor to the various com-mercial associations which have been formed on the continent since the war. It was only recently that British and American diplomatic relations were re-sumed with the Spanish dictator's government, although trade representatives had continued to maintain contact. Franco's dalliance with Hitler and Mussolini cannot easily be forgotten. His totalitarian control of the government cannot be condoned.

Against such sentiments, however, must be ranged the practical considerations of western defense. In the event of a war with Russia, most military experts agree that Europe would be quickly overrun by the Red Army. The south western barricade of the Pyrenees might well leave Spain the only possible foothold for the Allied campaign to reclaim the continent. Even apart from such a drastic picture, Spain's value as a base for air operations cannot be questioned.

The argument in this case holds that the West should not deny itself the use of Spain just because it does not like its form of government that we can make a deal without extending friendship.

The crux of the matter, of course, will be Franco's price for such an arrange-ment. This would be his opportunity to attempt to come in out of the cold and drive as hard a bargain as he could. But he must also be willing to pay a price himself, as is shown by his current promises to inject more democratic ele-ments into his government.

While the world is still nominally at peace, the west no doubt holds the better bargaining position. But the imminence of a European war would put Franco in the driver's seat, enabling him to demand almost any concessions for the use of his territory-tempered, of course, by his own need for protection from the Com-munist hordes. Now would seem to be the opportune time to act, if any action is to be taken. But the support of Britain and France, and all other democratic allies whose adverse criticism of Franco is frequent, must first be obtained by the United States. The bond between the democracies must not be weakened through suspicions of a strange bed-fellow, no matter how great the

An Answer To Water Critics

BECAUSE THE EXCESSIVELY DRY summer has emphasized irrigation difficulties in Saanich and necessitated restricted domestic garden watering in Oak Bay, some criticism has been leveled at Greater Victoria's water supply system. No one claims perfection for the service, yet a statement by a special writer on the editorial page of a Vancouver daily last week requires an answer In his article on the dry summer, the writer states: "A few years ago, Dr. E. A. Cleveland of Vancouver was asked for a report which carefully covered the shortage situation in Saanich and other suburbs of downtown Victoria. Nothing

The criticism is scarcely fair. In line with recommendations of the report the Greater Victoria Water District has been created and operates the supply system for the entire area. Seven miles of large diameter supply main were installed in 1950 and some benefit has accrued to the municipalities as a result of that development. It will become more valuable when the next step in the project is completed.

All member municipalities are improving their own distribution systems, as suggested in the Cleveland report, and a forest management plan covering the 30,000 acres of the watershed has been instituted.

A number of other measures to im-prove service have been taken, among them establishment of the Brentwood district organization to take water from Elk Lake, and a provincial government soil classification and irrigation survey has been made Greater Victoria authorities realize there are other developments needed to improve water service. Some of them are now in preparation, others are awaiting supplies. There is little justification to suggest that nothing has been done in respect to the recommendations advanced by Dr. Cleveland.

Survivors Of The Race

THE STORIES OF POST-WAR REFUgees will produce no more tragic tale than that of the 700 Kalmucks at present languishing in German displaced persons' camps.

The proud descendants of the "golden hordes" of Genghis Khan have been in a sense, displaced persons since the great Mongolian empire fell in the 14th century. For the last 300 years the Kalmucks lived in Russia, but were driven out after the revolution, refusing to re-linquish their proud independence. Horsemen and farmers for centuries, they men and farmers for centuries, they would not bow to the collectivization of the Communists. With the outbreak of the Second World War they moved westward from their sanctuary in the Balkans to end up in refugee camps. There they now remain, a plan to establish themselves in Paraguay having fallen

As refugees, the mills of the gods have not spared them. Many have for-saken the outdoor ways, taken higher education courses and prepared themselves for a différent life. Others, cling ing to the past, have gathered a few broken-down old dobbins in their camps to teach their young the traditional elements of horsemanship. Being orientals their acceptance by western nations has been difficult. And they refuse to be separated—this remnant of a once-proud race. As survivors they will cling to

What can the future hold for these people? Where can they once more find the free, open range, the nomadic econ-one, the uncomplicated living which was theirs through the ages?

The answers are not favorable. Like many another group which reveres a vanishing culture, they must change to meet the times or succumb. Their greatness must live in their tales and songs of another era in their converse. of another era, in their costumes, in their dances and music—to be paraded on feast days and other celebrations and then laid aside—an encumbrance in the work-aday world. So dies the Kalmucks' way of life, and there is little to replace it.

MR. DONALD FLEMING, M.P., and the Conservative party are worried by Mr. Abbott's continual revenue sur-Even if there were surpluses they would be nothing to worry about but in spent (which Mr.

Hutchison Fleming evidently considers a high crime and misdemeanor.) But this has produced no surplus except on the ledger. In relation to our prob-lems and our needs we have been operating on a deficit since the beginning of the war. Mr. Abbott knows that, if Mr. Fleming doesn't. So does every Cana-dian who owns a dollar.

THE NATION is like a friend of mine whose family suffered a long and expensive illness. At the end of it he was pensive illness. At the end of it he was in debt by some ten thousand dollars. He is earning about four thousand dol-lars a year and out of it he has contrived to save about a thousand dollars, which he uses to pay off the debt.

According to the calculations of the Canadian Government he has a surplus of a thousand dollars since he spends of a thousand dollars since he spenus

He cannot use it. He must go without

So long as the debt remains and he is paying interest he will laugh, in a melancholy sort of way, if you tell him that he has a surplus and therefore can afford to cut down his income, as Mr. Fleming proposes to cut down the in-come of the government by reducing

CANADA came out of the war after a long and expensive economic illness, the symptom of which is a fifty-cent dol-lar. It has a debt which costs, in interest charges, as much as the whole Government cost before the war. When Mr. Abbott tries to pay off some of that debt, by saving a little out of the Government's annual income he will laugh in a melancholy sort of way when he is indicted for the crime of piling up a surplus, Still, Mr. Abbott has himself to blame, in part anyway. He should never have used the misleading word, "sur-plus." Instead, he boasted of it, as doubtless he had a right to do. The word itself was politically fatal.

Tell the ordinary taxpayer that the Government has a surplus and he is outraged, since the surplus comes out of his hide. When the Conservative party attacked Mr. Abbott's "surpluses" in 1949 half my friends thought that somehow all this money was being sweated out of them and poured down a rat hole, was quite lost and probably was being spent on champagne and blondes.

IF MR. ABBOTT had stated, instead, that he was using part of his in-come to pay off a little of the national mortgage he would have saved himself a lot of trouble. Of course he said something like that, in the profound and un-readable language of budget speeches, but nobody listens to them.

The word "surplus" hung around Mr.

Abbott's neck like an albatross until, in desperation, he cut down taxes too so and too far to win the 1949 election, which the government would have won anyway. Now he must raise taxes again but, since he still has a "surplus" he is wearing the old carrion of politics.

HIS ENEMIES are making the most of it by ignoring our huge debt and the inflation which should compel any government to collect more than it spends. Until our debt is drastically reduced, at least until inflation is cured.

the word "surplus" should be expunged from the financial dictionary.

For we still have, in our national economy, a huge deficit, which is being paid by every man who owns a dollar and watches it shrink to fifty cents. The shape. Every Canadian who saves any-thing has lost half of it. He assuredly has no surplus.

The struggles of our political parties
the one defending, the other attacking a surplus which doesn't really exist won't matter much. What really matters is whether the people of Canada can stand prosperity, whether they can save money for a rainy day or pay off their rainy day debts in good times.

THE WHOLE Keynslan economics of this era depends on an affirmative answer to that question. They assume, by the cyclical budget theory, that governments will over-spend in bad times and under-spend in good, thus at once avoiding inflation or deflation and avoiding a debt which they cannot pay.

It is a large assumption which so far has never been made good in foreign countries, whose financial mismanage ment has usually landed them into revo lution of one sort or another. It has not yet been made good here either since we have politely repudiated half our debt by debasing the dollar.

WHEN a national treasurer attempts to do something about it, when he admits for a moment that he has a few dollars over at the end of the year, when he confesses to the horrid crime of a "surplus," he is denounced for one of the few sensible things that any government is doing anywhere.

Britain In Trouble New York Times

If Americans think they are having a difficult time making guns and butter they should pause to contemplate the massive troubles of our British friends. Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Gaitskell has just given his country a report that makes grave reading. Gold and dollar earnings have dropped sharply; the terms of trade are increasingly un favorable as the cost of imports rises faster than the selling prices of exports; imported raw materials and foods have skyrocketed in cost; taxes are well above ours and just about as high as they can go; the cost of living has been rising steadily and with it have come demands for higher wages that are hard to reject. Add to this mound of misery the same necessity for rearmament that we face necessity for rearmament that we face and one has an idea of what the British are up against.

MATTER AND ENERGY

The biblical account of creation and the explanation given by your correspondent Mr. Holdcroft in his recent letters are both very far from agreeing with scientific knowledge of today. First there is absolutely no scientific knowledge of a "Heaven" at all, and if at its beginning the earth was without form that may be taken as agreeing with science that it was gaseous or incandescent, and if so then it certainly was not shrouded in total darkness as the account states. And since the earth was composed of matter in whatever state, it most certainly was not "void", since matter and force, or energy are forever co-existant.

The recent observations made at Palomar prove conclusively that matter is indestructible and may be reformed into solar systems billions of years after it has served in other forms.

Since it is now common knowledge at matter is eternal and indestructable, it follows that it could not have been created; but both the biblical writers and your correspondent are very wide of the mark as they try to describe what was merely evolution in the formation of our solar system. Matter contained all of the energy necessary to this change in formation, and no out-side force was employed.

THROUGH THE YEARS

"A Peace-Loving Citizen" uses some-what venomous language. Mr. Petter undoubtedly knows his history. The word catholic was originally applied to a holy man who built an open city. He commenced as a hermit in a hut but is now a dignified official inside a cathedral. He originally acknowledged only the authority of God, as he understood it, and did not usurp the prerogative of God by claiming a monopoly of spiritual or temporal power upon this earth. Neither did Jesus. He gave advice.

Mr. Kennedy Replies

I have read with interest your edi-torial in the Times of July 18 under the caption "Odd Spectacle," and while, of course, you have every right to express your views on this as well as any other question, I do feel that the color of your article is hardly fair to the Honorable the Attorney-General or the Provincial Government, due to the fact that you have made no reference whatever to the main point in connection with this whole

The restrictions referred to were first placed in operation by the Federal Government as a war measure, as they felt Canadian exchange could be used to better advantage to purchase other commodities badly needed by Canadians, and their action was by Federal Order, over which, of course, no Provincial Government had any authority.

Following the war period this order with others passed during the war period was removed, thereby leaving the door open for the importation of American liquor, if desired.

The question was discussed at the first Annual Convention of the Liquor Boards following the removal of the order, and it was the general consensus of opinion that it would be the best policy to continue as had been the case under these federal restrictions, and this stand has been reaffirmed at each successive convention, from which you will judge it is hardly fair to treat this as a policy adopted by only British Columbia, as every other province in Canada follows this same procedure.

While the general reference is made to wine only, it must be appreciated that the question deals in broader policy of liquor, and not only wine, and if American wines are listed then it is only natural that American distillers will expect the same treatment, and anyone familiar with the liquor industry will realize the resulting complications.

The American tourist visiting Canada follows the procedure adopted by the average tourist in any country, that is, he prefers testing the food and drinks of the country he visits, and as far as I am able to judge there is little criticism in any other part of the country similar to that existing in British Columbia, which of course is aggravated by the fact that a member of the government is in the wine industry, and the usual procedure is to criticize on this basis.

I believe with these facts you will agree with my opening statement that you have omitted to disclose one of the main points in this whole problem, the fact that it is Dominion-wide W. F. KENNEDY.

Chairman, Liquor Control Board.

On The Other Hand

The editorial under the heading "Odd Spectacle" dealing with the exclusion of Californian wines in the Times edition of July 18 is full of pungent facts of July 18 is full of pungent facts.

The liquor business in B.C. is government-owned; that is to say it is owned by the people of B.C., but the owners, the people, are restricted to buying, trrespective of quality or value, the wines the Liquor Commission chooses to dispense. As your editorial aptly concludes "the consumer is told what cludes . . . "the consumer is told what he must drink"

It is high time that the citizens of B.C., who are the owners of the B.C. Liquor Commission, insist on their right to purchase the wines they prefer, whether they come from France, the British Commonwealth, the United States or Timbuctoo. It is admitted that our local wineswhatever party minister is financially interested, although no party minister should be—do not have the climatic advantages to compare with Californian wines, alcohol having to be added to balance the lack of natural sugar

To quote a well-known book, "A little wine for the stomach's sake" presumptu-ously may be modified to "A little good wine for the stomach's sake," and, if the Californian wines are more suitable for the stomach and the palate than B.C. wines, then the citizens of B.C. are en titled to be able to purchase them in open competition with the local wines, apart from the consideration of the give and take in export and import which is the lifeblood of international business.

On The Balance In Korea

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

THERE is a fairly simple explanation of the strange ritual at Kaesong
the talks about a cease-fire, as a prelude to an armistice, as a prelude to peace negotiations, which are carried on while the Korean fight ing also continues. The cease-fire and armistice are in fact ex-pected to be the last serious acts of the Korean drama.

No doubt, when and if the generals and admirals successfully complete their labors complete their labors at Kaesong, the diplo-mats and statesmen will go to work in their turn, under somewhat less primitive conditions. No doubt there will be peace negotiations, with all the familiar trappings of agendas, proposals and counter-proposals, and loud hagglings about the meaning of such terms as "free elections." But al-most no one hopes that these negotiations will accomplish anything.

Gen. Nam Il and Gen. Tung Hua clearly hold this view. Hence the North Korean and Chinese representatives are trying to crowd into the Kaesong agreement clauses that belong in a final settlement, such as provision for with-drawal of all foreign troops from Korea.

Equally, the same view is held by the leading personalities in Washington and Tokyo. And that is why Vice-Admiral Joy and his delegation are proceeding with such meticulous delibera-tion, even although this means that the somewhat desultory fighting is thereby

The reasons for this view are also plain enough. After a cease-fire and armistice, each side will hold roughly half of Korea. Each will demand a final settlement on its own terms—the United Nations calling for a settlement responsive to the wishes of the Korean people; the Communists demanding a "demo-cratic" settlement which will ensure Communist control of the country. This sort of negotiation is doomed to dead-lock before it begins.

What then will be the consequences, if the bitter, bloody war in Korea simply tails out into a cease-fire and armistice, without the formal peace agreement that customarily concludes wars?

It is possible, in the first place, that defense of the post-armistice status quo be left to a greatly can eventually

rean hostilities than any peace treaty. Third, on the larger question of peace treaty vs. no peace treaty, there is one advantage in having no peace treaty that almost no one seems to have thought of. In brief, the announced American policy is to neutralize For-mosa for the duration of the Korean war; and this has been somewhat grudg-ingly accepted by the world at large. But if the Korean war is formally terminated, and the U.S. still seeks to continue the neutralization of Formosa, it will run into the worst trouble with its allies and in the United Nations that it has seen yet. On the other hand, if the Korean fighting just tails out into a cease-fire, armistice, and deadlocked peace negotia-tion, the whole status quo will be per-petuated, including the neutralization of Formosa. It can and will be continued. under these conditions, without too much difficulty. And so we shall be borrow-ing a useful leaf from the book of the other side.

Ups And Downs

By BRIAN TOBIN

"WELL-MEANING people," said the Elevator Man, "have run into frustration so often, good intentions have gone wrong so many times, helpful deeds

so frequently bring only trouble to the doers—it's no wonder people throw up their hands and say, 'You can't win!' The return for generosity is often a scolding for not being more generous.

People are glad to see rescue arrive, but you might have got here sooner.' To some characters even Santa Claus is a miser-and why doesn't he come twice a year? Often, too, good will toward one person starts an outcry from somebody else who wants the same treatment. Take that case in England the other day. A big brewery company decided to help out its office staff by buying them all new suits—the whole 200 of them. A nice gesture and a welcome aid against rising living costs. The company sat back, its good deed done. But the gratitude of the office staff was swamped by the demands of the 130 girls in the bottling works, who didn't get any new clothes. They were so mad at the 'class discrimination' that they all went on strike. You can't win.

Going up! "Most of us," said the Elevator Man, 'have a touch of the same attitude. figure a certain amount of good luck is our due in life, in which case it isn't luck any more but payment of a debt on demand. And we get a little touchy if it's too long delayed or too small. We ignore what we have for what we hop to get. Instead of enjoying our ice cream cone, we cry because somebody else has a bigger one. But nobody seems to want to share the other fella's mis-fortune as well as his assets. Lower

"Naturally," said the Elevator Man. "Naturally, said the Elevator Man, 'life being what it is, some of us are going to develop a pretty negative ap-proach. We're like that story of the fella in a cafe who ordered a cup of coffee. Without cream,' he added, Soon the waitress hurried back. 'Sorry,' she announced. 'We have no cream. Do you mind having it without milk instead'?'

Federal Funds To Aid U.B.C. To Train Laboratory Workers OTTAWA—The University of larged so that the output of British Columbia is planning to double its output of trained laboratory workers for public health work throughout Canada, and will be assisted in setting up this expanded program by a grant from federal health funds.

This was announced today by

Health and Welfare Minister Paul Martin, who noted that an acute shortage of trained bacteriologists and senior laboratory technicians exists in Canada. In British Columbia alone, he said, provincial laboratory staffs are four and one-half times larger than they were 15 years ago, and a greater demand for laboratory services in hospitals and public health programs assures a con-tinued demand for well-trained

The Minister of External Affairs, Mr. F. W. Doige, made a plea for an overhaul of the book when speaking in the House this week. "When you study our little book you find words such as chump, dense, hooey, conceit and make believe listed as unparliamentary," he said.

Poise At The Dinner Table Is More Than Good Manners

I am writing about poise this week. To my mind it is an inner quality. It is not a characteristic everyone has but it can be de-veloped with practise. I hope to give you some practical sugges-tions which will help you develop it if you find yours is rather limp. Take the matter of eating. If you will look about you in any restaurant at almost any dinner table, and especially when at a drug store counter during the noon hour, you will find that few persons have poise while eating.

Do you bend over your food at the table like a tired straw? Do you sit with your shoulders and head slumped forward? Do you cut your meat with the eagle-spread approach? Are you frightened by lobster and spaghetti? Do you feel awkward when removing fruit pits from your mouth?

Canadian Stocks Give High Yield

By HARRY YOUNG, Times Business Editor A varied portfolio of Canadian shares that will give a yield of over seven per cent on the indicated dividend rate is quite a possibility on present market prices.

From a list of investment yields published by Hagar and Swayne, I have selected 12 industrial common shares which give an average yield of 7.20 per cent; eight mining shares which yield an average of 8.96 per cent, and three preferreds with an average yield of 7.11 per cent.
